1. Introduction

This syllabus describes the intended learning and assessment for Arts in the Junior Secondary Phase. As a subject, Arts is within the aesthetic area of learning in the curriculum, but has thematic links to other subjects across the curriculum.

The aesthetic area includes learning to value and to communicate through the arts and to apply aesthetic qualities in other content areas. It involves sensory, emotional and intellectual experience, as well as creative thinking and activity.

The Arts Syllabus can be seen as a support structure for the two optional pre-vocational subjects in Grades 8 - 9: Visual Art and Integrated Performing Arts, but it goes beyond that to explore the influence of culture on our daily lives and in our art. This syllabus is a guideline and application will differ from region to region and school to school, depending on the availability of resources, learners' level of development in the arts and cultural heritage.

Arts is an interdisciplinary subject combining culture with visual and performing arts and crafts. The subject is compulsory and non-examinable, however it should be assessed and should appear on the learners' report card.

2. Rationale

The particular features of Arts at this phase are to promote the holistic development, balanced growth, socialisation and development of the creative ability of a learner. The subject area is a means through which the process of unfolding, stimulating and capturing the learner's imagination and self-expression takes place. Through this subject area learners explore their inner selves, their environment, and make discoveries about communication through arts media.

An arts course should encourage personal expression, imagination, sensitivity, conceptual thinking, powers of observation, an analytical ability and practical attitudes. It should lead to greater understanding of the role of the visual arts in the history of civilizations; widen cultural horizons; and enrich the individual. In addition, it should combine a breadth and depth of study so that it may accommodate a wide range of abilities and individual resources.

Arts complement literary, mathematical, scientific and factual subjects. It is especially concerned with the development of visual perception and aesthetics and is a form of communication and a means of expressing ideas and feelings.

The Arts syllabus for the Junior Secondary Phase aims at building on the basic concepts of the arts without losing sight of the interconnectedness of activities, developing a spirit of enquiry and experimentation, fostering skills of observation and creativity, and reinforcing work in other areas of the curriculum. The syllabus provides a broad experience-based arts curriculum for all learners. Arts support and enhance the skills needed in other subjects.

One of the most fundamental modes of human learning is through play, imitation, music, movement and visual expression. Before they start school, learners will have a repertoire of acquired competencies, which when refined, become artistic expression. The areas where their acquired competencies are strongest will vary from learner to learner.

3. Aims

Arts promotes cultural awareness and appreciation by:

- stimulating the learner's imagination and creativity;
- encouraging self-expression, confidence and communication with others;
- fostering self-discipline, responsibility and cooperation;
- initiating the development of using the arts as a means of expression;
- enhancing problem-solving skills.

This syllabus is intended as a broad course exploring practical and critical/contextual work through a range of two-dimensional and/or three-dimensional processes. Where Arts as title or descriptor is used in this syllabus, it also encompasses new technologies in addition to traditional media and processes.

4. Inclusive education

Inclusive education is the right of every learner and promotes access to and participation in the full range of educational programmes and services offered by the education system in mainstream schools. It is based on the principle of supporting and celebrating the diversity found among all learners and removing all barriers to learning. The Arts teacher in the Junior Secondary phase should therefore accommodate learners with special educational needs by adapting this syllabus to the needs of the learner through differentiation of teaching methods and material as indicated in the Curriculum Framework for Inclusive Education: A Supplement to the National Curriculum for Basic Education (2014).

Learners who are so severely impaired that they cannot benefit from attending mainstream schools will be provided for according to their needs in learning support units, resource units or resource schools until such time that they can join a mainstream school structure, if possible.

Gender issues should be approached through artistic expression and through the organisation of work. Boys and girls have different ways looking at and reacting to the world around them and expressing these views in their art. By working together in art they can enrich one another's way of understanding and expressing themselves.

5. Links to other subjects and cross-curricular issues

Visual art, music, drama and dance are always about something. That "something" will be matters of interest and concern on the part of the learners, much of which is contained in themes and topics from other subjects such as Social Studies, Religious Education, and Languages, Mathematical, Scientific and factual subjects, etc. The arts provide scope for reflecting over and expressing feelings and thus for developing emotional as well as cognitive intelligence more than many other subjects. Cross-curricular issues such as the environment and Human Rights and Democracy are main concerns of learners. The HIV and AIDS pandemic with widespread illness and death is one area where arts can help learners deal with difficult reactions and feelings. The learner will gradually work through these to build empathy with the victims, self-confidence, assertiveness and hope for themselves and support for others.

Role-play, mime, dramatization and art work are used as part of learner-centred teaching methods in other subjects. Developing the learners' skills in these areas, Arts will help improve their learning when using them in other subjects and thus enhance learning across the curriculum.

The cross-curricular issues include environmental education, HIV and AIDS, population education, education for human rights and democracy, information and communication technology (ICT) and road safety. These issues have been introduced to the formal curriculum, because each of the issues deals with particular risks and challenges in our Namibian society. They should be dealt with across all phases and in every subject where the topics overlap with the content of that subject.

All of our learners need to:

- understand the nature of these risks and challenges
- know how they will impact our society and the quality of life of our people now and in the future
- understand how these risks and challenges can be addressed on a national and global level
- understand how they can play a part in addressing these risks and challenges in their own school and local community

The main risks and challenges have been identified as:

- the challenges and risks we face if we do not care for and manage our natural resources
- the challenges and risks caused by HIV and AIDS
- the challenges and risks to health caused by pollution, poor sanitation and waste
- the challenges and risks to democracy and social stability caused by inequity and governance that ignores rights and responsibilities
- the challenges and risks we face if we do not adhere to road safety measures
- the challenges and risks we face because of globalisation

Since some topics/activities are more suitable to address specific cross-curricular issues, those issues will receive more emphasis in those particular subjects. In this syllabus the following are links to cross-curricular issues:

6. Approach to teaching and learning

The approach to teaching and learning is based on a paradigm of Learner-Centred Education (LCE) described in ministerial policy documents and the LCE conceptual framework. This approach ensures optimal quality of learning when the principles are put into practice.

The aim of learner-centred education is to develop learning with understanding, and the knowledge, skills and attitudes to contribute to the development of society. The starting point for teaching and learning is the fact that the learner brings to the school a wealth of knowledge and social experience gained continually from the family, community, and through interaction with the environment. Learning in school must involve, build on, extend and challenge the learner's prior knowledge and experience.

Learners learn best when they are actively involved in the learning process through a high degree of participation, contribution and production. At the same time, each learner is an individual with his/her own needs, pace of learning, experiences and abilities. The teacher must be able to sense the needs of the learners, the nature of the learning to be done, and how to shape learning experiences accordingly. Teaching strategies must therefore be varied but flexible within well-structured sequences of lessons.

It is best to let learners discover or explore information for them. The learners must be allowed to find their own way through the topic.

Working in groups or as a whole class must therefore be organised as appropriate to the task at hand. Wherever possible, cooperative and collaborative learning should be encouraged and in such cases, tasks must be designed so that group work is needed to complete it: otherwise, the learners will not see any relevance in carrying out tasks together. As the learners' artistic, personal, social and communication skills improve, they can gradually be given more challenging topics that need more research and planning. The learners may use the knowledge of any person from the community to help them with the research, planning and the creating of the play/art piece.

Arts lends itself to presentation to parents and the community. Art also provides many opportunities to bring in or visit members of the community who are known for their skills, to expose the learners to practising artists. This should be done for motivational/encouragement purposes, and not in such a way as to give the learners a feeling that they cannot do as well as the artists they see.

This syllabus serves as a guiding document in the Namibian context, bearing in mind the level of training in specific subject areas, availability of teaching and learning materials, and learners' background and school environments.

6.1 The integrated approach

This syllabus is designed to integrate all aspects of the arts into the search for cultural values and meanings. The integrated nature of the syllabus lends itself to a thematic approach. Theme work encourages learners to do their own research and themes can be chosen from the immediate environment, thus drawing on the previous experiences of learners. Theme work is not, however, necessarily the only approach to the syllabus, and teachers may use any approach with which they feel comfortable. No formal textbooks are required, as the syllabus is open-ended and skills-based, and the teacher and learners will utilise primary resources within the immediate environment and the community to assist in the gathering and sharing of information. If a thematic approach is followed, one theme would be used to practice all the skills involved in the creative process: researching, information sharing, compiling, accessing existing knowledge, practicing and utilising acquired knowledge. These skills will be applied to all the disciplines of the arts: visual arts and crafts, dance, drama and music. One theme would probably be sufficient for a whole trimester, since only one period per teaching week is allocated to the subject.

However, it is important to note that not all skills will be utilised all the time. For some lessons, the learners will create visual artwork while in other lessons learners will learn or create a new dance or song. The aim at the end of the theme (or trimester) is to present a performance the learners have developed throughout the trimester. The visual arts or crafts could form an exhibition on its own and/or serve as costumes, decor and props for a performance. For example, if the theme is celebrations, learners can create costumes for a celebration. The dialogue, songs, dances and plays performed by the learners will depict actual or imagined realities.

As cultural values and meanings are taught, the richness and diversity of Namibian and other cultures are experienced. Learners and other members of the community form a resource base of knowledge at the disposal of the teacher and learners of Arts. There is less emphasis on the product and more on the process as the learner gains knowledge and skills through exploring, doing and appraising. There is less emphasis on art as an end in itself and more on exploring/learning culture through art. The learner is not a passive observer, but is engaged in activities designed to help him/her draw his/her own conclusions.

As culture forms the basis of our assumptions, influences and personalities, it is essential that we do not lose touch with our own history and that we respect the history and identities of others. For these reasons, a general arts education should not be elitist and exclusive, but the inalienable right of all children. Arts is therefore structured to provide cultural and artistic development opportunities for all Junior Secondary learners in a way that encourages an awareness of the inter-relationship of arts and culture, as well as an appreciation for the validity of each individual art form. Learners are expected to demonstrate a progressive improvement in skills as well as broadening their knowledge about culture and the arts throughout the Junior Secondary Phase.

6.2 The teacher's role

Arts strives to exploit the teacher's strengths while drawing on primary resources such as parents, other members of the community, local artist, learners themselves or other audio and audio-visual aids to act as 'teachers' for those disciplines in which the teacher is not formally trained or knowledgeable.

The teacher's role will, in most cases be that of facilitator, especially in view of the learner-centred nature of the syllabus. For example, a teacher who can play an instrument like the marimba, guitar or drums, can accompany the learners on that instrument when teaching and learning or creating a new song. However, a teacher who is not comfortable playing a musical instrument can make use of a compact disc to accompany the learners. A teacher or a person from the community who is trained or creative in dancing can give some dance training to the learners, while a teacher who is not comfortable teaching dance can get one of the learners with dance talent or knowledge to coach the learners, or make use of a video cassette/DVD to generate ideas. Additionally a teacher who knows someone involved in community theatre can utilise the skills of that person to assist in teaching the principles of drama to the learners. Likewise, a learner may have a parent who is an artist (painter, sculptor, woodcarver, singer, actor, dancer etc.) who can be used to assist in the visual arts /crafts and performing training of the learners.

If a production of some sort is the anticipated product of the training, the activities for the creation thereof can occur concurrently. For example: the more gifted visual artists can work on the props/décor for the performance, while the dancers practice their dance combinations, the actors practice the performance of their play and the singers practice their songs together with the musicians who will accompany them.

Although not all learners will be equally gifted in all the disciplines of the arts, it is nonetheless important that they all be exposed to every aspect through group singing, group performing, group dancing, group miming, group painting, drawing, constructing, etc. When planning a performance all learners can and should be actively involved in the theatre experience and they will find it educational and informative as well as a whole lot of fun.

Lastly it is important for learners to be exposed to the artworks and performances of others, from Namibian and other cultures. This can be achieved in one of two ways. Learners can be taken to a theatre, community hall, an arena, cultural festivals, art galleries, or any other venue where performances and exhibitions take place. Artists can be invited to visit the school and give a performance or demonstration, or exhibit their work or perform their play to the whole school during the assembly period or any other suitable time.

The teacher must decide, in relation to the learning objectives and competencies to be achieved

- when it is best to convey content directly
- when it is best to let learners discover or explore information for themselves
- when they need directed learning
- when they need reinforcement or enrichment learning
- when there is a particular progression of skills or information that needs to be followed
- or when the learners can be allowed to find their own way through a topic or area of content

7. End-of-phase competencies

On entry to the Junior Secondary phase, all learners are expected to be able to write a play with dialogue, music, dance and visual arts (props) and perform the play. The play must consist out of dialogue, music, dance and visual art. All the learners will be able to manage the minimum number of specific objectives.

On completion of the Junior Secondary phase in Arts, learners are expected to be able to write a play and perform it. The play must consist of script, story line, music, dance and visual art relevant to the topic.

8. Summary of the learning content

The following table gives an overview of what learners should be able to do:

9. Learning content

9.1 Introduction to learning content

1. The learning content outlined below is designed to provide guidance to teachers as to what will be assessed in the overall evaluation of learners. It is not meant to limit, in any way, the teaching programme of any particular school. Arts is first and foremost a developmental rather than a rigidly structured subject. As such, it is not desirable to try to prescribe a structured progression. The content and competencies are generic. As the learner develops, the command of art topics and expression should become more sophisticated.

2. Themes refer to those components of the subject which learners are required to study/master.

The general objectives are derived from the theme and are the general knowledge, understanding and demonstration of skills on which learners will be assessed.

The specific objectives are the detailed and specified content of the syllabus, which learners need to master to achieve the general objectives, and on which they will be assessed. Specific objectives indicate what learners should be able to do at the end of the year.

3. The progress from Grade 8 to 9 lies in the skills that are mastered at a higher level and in the moving from the known (Namibian context) to the unknown (African context), although it is not specified in each specific objective.

10. Assessment

A learner-centred curriculum and learner-centred teaching encompass a broad range of knowledge and skills which are relevant to the knowledge-based society. The specific objectives in the syllabus state what understanding and skills a learner must demonstrate as a result of this teaching-learning process, and which objectives will be assessed. However, it is intended that the curriculum should focus on learning, not on assessment and examination. Assessment is only to support learning.

10.1 Continuous assessment

In order to capture the full range and levels of competence, a variety of formal and informal continuous assessment situations is needed to give a complete picture of the learner's progress and achievements in all subjects. Continuous assessment must be clear, simple and manageable, and explicitly anchored in learner-centred principles and practice. Teachers must provide reliable and valid information of the learner's performance in the specific objectives. The information gathered about the learners' progress and achievements should be used to give feedback to the learners about their strong and weak points, where they are doing well and why, where and how they need to improve. The parents should be regularly informed about the progress of their child in all subjects, be encouraged to reward achievements, and given suggestions as to how they can support their learning activities. The learner's progress in Arts must be reported to parents on the school report.

10.2 Formative and summative assessment

The two modes of assessment used are formative continuous assessment and summative assessment. Formative continuous assessment is any assessment made during the school year in order to improve learning and to help shape and direct the teaching-learning process. Assessment has a formative role for learners if and when:

- it is used to motivate them to extend their knowledge and skills, establish sound values, and to promote healthy habits of study
- assessment tasks help learners to solve problems intelligently by using what they have learnt
- the teacher uses the information to improve teaching methods and learning materials

Summative assessment is an assessment made at the end of the school year based on the accumulated total of the progress and achievements of the learner throughout the year in a given subject, together with any end-of-year tests or examinations. The result of summative assessment is a single end-of-year promotion grade.

10.3 Informal and formal methods

The teacher must assess how well each learner is mastering the specific objectives described in the syllabus and from this gain a picture of the all-round progress of the learner. To a large extent, this can be done in an informal way and in their participation in general, through structured observation of each learner's progress in learning and practice situations while they are investigating things, interpreting phenomena and data, applying knowledge, communicating and making value judgements.

When it is necessary to structure assessment more formally, the teacher should, as far as possible, use the same sort of situation as ordinary learning and practice situations to assess the competency of the learner.

No end-of-term test or examinations may be written.

10.4 Evaluation

Information from informal and formal continuous assessment is to be used by the teacher to know where it is necessary to adapt methods and materials to the individual progress and needs of each learner. At the end of each main topic of teaching, and at the end of each term, the teacher, together with the learners, should evaluate the process in terms of tasks completed, participation, what the learners have learnt, and what can be done to improve the working atmosphere and achievements of the class. No test or examination will be written.

10.5 Criterion-referenced Grades

When grades are awarded in continuous assessment, it is essential that they reflect the learner's actual level of achievement in the competencies, and are not related to how well other learners are achieving or to the idea that a fixed percentage of the learners must always be awarded a grade A, B, C, and so on (norm-referencing). In criterion-referenced assessment, each assessment task must have an assessment rubric with criteria descriptors for what the learner must demonstrate in order to be awarded the grade. It is important that teachers in each department/section work together to have a shared understanding of what the criteria descriptors mean and how to apply them in continuous assessment, so that grades are awarded correctly and consistently across subjects. Only then will the assessment results be reliable

10.6 Grade descriptors

The learner's summative achievement in the specific objectives will be shown in letter grades A to E, where A is the highest and E the lowest grade for learners achieving minimum competency level. In extremely rare cases where a learner has not reached the minimum level of competency a U will be awarded. When letter grades are awarded, it is essential that they reflect the learner's actual level of achievement in relation to the specific objectives. The relation between the letter grades and specific objectives is shown in the table below.

| Grade | % Range | Grade Descriptors                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| A     | 80%+    | Achieved objectives exceptionally well. The learner is outstanding in all areas of competency.                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| B     | 70-79%  | Achieved objectives very well. The learner's achievement lies substantially above average requirements and the learner is highly proficient in most areas of competency.                                                                                                           |
| C     | 60-69%  | Achieved objectives well. The learner has mastered the specific objectives and can apply them in unknown situations and contexts.                                                                                                                                                  |
| D     | 50-59%  | Achieved objectives satisfactorily. The learner's achievement corresponds to average requirements. The learner may be in need of learning support in some areas.                                                                                                                   |
| E     | 40-49%  | Achieved the minimum number of objectives to be considered competent. The learner may not have achieved all the specific objectives, but the learner's achievement is sufficient to exceed the minimum competency level. The learner is in need of learning support in most areas. |
| U     | 0-39%   | Ungraded. The learner has not been able to reach a minimum level of competency in the specific objectives, even with extensive help from the teacher. The learner is seriously in need of learning support.                                                                        |

10.7 Continuous assessment: detailed guidelines

Continuous assessment should be planned and programmed at the beginning of the trimester for the trimester, and kept as simple as possible. Marks given for class and homework activities will be recorded for continuous assessment.

A short play (10-15 minutes) for continuous assessment activities per term should be graded and recorded. The play must consist out of all the elements find in a play. Not more than two assessments per term. These continuous assessments must be carefully planned and marked according to a marking scheme and marking criteria. Teachers can choose to grade and/or record more than the required continuous assessments if it is necessary for formative purposes. An end-of-year summative grade will be based only on the assessment tasks described in the syllabus. See Annex 2 and 3.
